Imagine having a huge wardrobe filled with the most amazing dresses that you can wear once and never ever wear again.

It is an idea that most people would love but would never do because of the environmental and financial impact. Fortunately for those of us who secretly dream of an endless supply of new dresses to wear, a new website has been launched recently that allows us to do this for a fraction of the cost.

It's like having a whole wardrobe! Dressed Up To The 9s offers a great way to extend your wardrobe without breaking the bank. In return for a fee, you can rent a designer or vintage dress for seven days.

With designer dresses from the likes of Matthew Williamson and Alexander McQueen and starting from just £35 per hire, it is great value. The site is free to register on and you can start hiring straight away.

The site also allows you to register your own dresses up for hire, charging a 15% commission when the dress is hired. All you need to do is upload a picture of your dress, they will let you know how much you can charge for your dress and they will do the rest. They also arrange the delivery and collection of the dress. As more and more of us ladies register our dresses for hire the collection will only get bigger and better.

Go to dresseduptothe9s.com to start hiring.
